learn and are on track for success later in life," said John K. Harris, CSEE PAC Chairman. "Children don't have money; we do. What we need is to support and elect passionate advocates like Kate and Holly-who will bring bold leadership to Sacramento, informed by a practical understanding of the challenges facing the families of young children. CSEE PAC is dedicated to electing such people"

CSEE PAC is a non-partisan committee dedicated to the support of candidates who champion the improvement and availability of high-quality early education services in California. Kate Anderson is an Associate with the law firm Munger, Tolles & Olson LLP, and has devoted her career to being a passionate advocate for the quality childcare she and other working women need. Holly Mitchell is also a working mother who is the CEO of Crystal Stairs, one of the largest non-profit organizations in the state, providing child care resources and referral services for thousands of families in Los Angeles.

"I want to thank CSEE for their support, endorsement and for all that they are doing for kids in this state. Too often children's voices, especially our youngest children, are left out of the debate," said Kate. "I want to serve in Sacramento because I want to make their voices heard. CSEE PAC wants that too. The PAC is leading a movement to elect leaders who are going to prioritize early childhood education and I am thrilled to have their enthusiastic support."

Kate Anderson and Holly Mitchell are running in adjacent districts in southern California, covering the regions of the South Bay and southwest Los Angeles. CSEE PAC is aggressively engaging candidates from around the state, from any party-who are willing to advocate for the interests of young children. CSEE PAC is a committee of Californians for the Support of Early Education, a non-profit, 501(c)4 organization supporting voter education and registration among child care providers, parents, and the public at-large.
