All English Learner students must be assessed annually with the California English Language Development Test or an alternate proficiency test to determine their English proficiency level. This determination plays a key role in educational decision-making for English Learner students with disabilities. This workshop will examine issues surrounding this critical assessment area. Participants will:

- become familiar with the content of the CELDT
- learn about the administration of this instrument
- learn the significance of student scores for designation of proficiency levels
- learn the instructional implications of proficiency levels
- learn how students are redesignated as English Proficient
